OCTOBER 30 DATE FOR BIG REPUBLICAN RALLY

Notable Guests to be Present at Monster Demonstration

SECURING SPEAKERS

Gov. J. K. Tener to Procure Services of Notable Men Throughout Country

With an efficient and active executive committee at work, perparations are in progress for a mammoth Republican rally to be held in Charleroi on Wednesday evening, October 30. This will be the biggest demonstration that will be held in Washington county during the campaign, and it is being planned with a magnitude that will include the whole Monongahela valley, and will take in portions of Westmoreland and Fayette counties. Some topliner speakers, including Governor Tener, will be scheduled and the enthusiasm that will be let loose on that occasion will show to the country at large that the Grand Old Party has not lost its grip in the greatest manufacturing district in the whole United States.

Arrangements for this big demonstration, which will wind up the Republican campaign in the Monongahela valley, were started at a meeting of the Charleroi Republican club held in the Bank of Charleroi Hall Friday evening. An enthusiastic band of workers responded to the call of President J. J. Hott to make the arrangements and all entered into the work with a spirit that insures is success. Plans were offered and discussed and action was taken by appointing an executive committee composed of Charles O. Frye, chairman, who had previously been elected chief marshal of the club, J. J. Hott, J. W. Mathias, J. K. Rickey, R. H. Rush, W. R. Gaut, and D. M. McCloskey. This committee will appoint all the subsidiary committees necessary to complete the details of the demonstration.

The general plan to be followed out is along similar lines when Governor J. K. Tener opened his gubernatorial campaign in Charleroi two years ago. All the towns and communities are to be specially invited to participate, and an organized effort will be made to bring big delegations to take part in the parade. Special trains and street cars will be run and every effort made to provide means to bring the largest crowd to Charleroi that ever assembled in honor of the Grand Old Party.

Governor J. K. Tener has signified his intention of being present, and has volunteered to secure some speakers who are among the topliners of the country. These have not yet been definitely decided upon, but names like J. Aden Bede, Congressman J. Hampton Moore, Senator William E. Crow, and others are mentioned. At all events some of the most prominent speakers will be secured and all the local celebrities of the vicinity will also be invited.

President Hott announced that the Republican headquarters over the Sample Shoe store have been opened and will be available until after election. A poll is being taken of the voters which shows that there are no serious defections from the Republi-

BRIDGE MAY BE STARTED

Exceptions Withdrawn in Brownsville Proceedings

LAST OBSTACLE GONE

Word has been received by the Commissioners of Fayette county that the exceptions which had been filed in the matter of the building of the new Brownsville bridge had been withdrawn and the proceeding before the Supreme court had been abandoned.

President John S. Langley of the Fayette county board states that the proposition will bet aken up immediately with the commissioners of Washington county, that a competent engineer will be employed and that work will start with the least delay possible.

This will be good news to the people of Brownsville. Ever since their old bridge was ordered razed by the War Department they have sorely felt the need of another structure. The traffic between Brownsville and West Brownsville is not heavy itself, but the inter-county traffic is constantly becoming heavier. As soon as the new bridge is ready for travel relief will come not only from the delays and dangers of the ferry system, but also from the burdensome tolls.

This is the removal of the last obstacle to this project which means so much to both Fayette and Washington counties.

TWO HAVE NARROW ESCAPE IN RUNAWAY

President Leppep of Moose Brewing Company Sustains Severe Injuries--Brewmaster Suffers From Toss From Buggy

George Leppep, aged 62 years, president of the Moose Brewing company at Roscoe and Otto Koeniger, aged 42, brewmaster at the Moose brewery had a narrow escape from death in a runaway on Fifth street Thursday afternoon. The horse they were driving and which was a livery animal belonging to Dr. D.E. Kimmell of Charleroi was so injured that it had to be shot. The accident happened at Crest avenue and Fifth street.

Leppep and Koeniger had been to the residence of Joe Ghrist about three miles out of town to look at a team of horses for the brewing company. They were returning down Fifth street at Shady avenue, when for some reason the horse they were driving started on a jog trot. Apparently thinking the animal was frightened and fearing the consequences the men tried to stop it. They only served to increase the speed of the horse.

Down Fifth street to Meadow avenue it ran and then continued on down the steep hill at a faster gait. Leppep who was driving continued to draw and saw on the lines. He attempted to turn the horse out Crest avenue. Unable to control the buggy sufficiently to make the turn successful, the horse fell and skidded against the telephone pole at the corner of Fifth and Crest.

Both men were hurled from the buggy. The horse laid with its head down hill, one of its hind legs in the grating of the flush tank. Leppep had sustained the worst fall of the two men and was picked up in a dazed condition. The other man was able to care for himself. Leppep was carried into the home of C. C. Crill on Fifth street nearby, and Dr. J. Clive Enos and Dr. H. J. Repman called. His worst injuries were about the right side of his head and face. He had a severe cut above the right eye. It was feared at first that he would lose sight of this member, but prompt attention probably will result in it being saved. Mr. Leppep was taken to the Wellington Hotel and later in the evening proceeded to his home in McKeesport. Mr. Koeniger's worst injuries consisted of bruises. He had one of his limbs severely hurt.

The horse when it went into the grating of the flush tank had a hind leg broken. It sustained a deep cut between the two fore legs and a cut over an eye. Although it was one of the most valuable horses he had in his stable, Dr. Kimmell deemed it advisable to put it out of its misery and shot it himself. The animal was one he had used in his livery trade over five years.

WILL RECEIVE BIDS ON SPEERS ROAD

Advertisement to be Made by State Highway Department Next Week--Probable That Work Will Start This Fall

According to information received today the State Highway department will advertise next week for bids on the construction of that section of State Highway Route, No. 118, between the Maple Creek bridge at the end of McKean avenue and the Belle Vernon bridge at Speers. Gov. Tener was seen in Pittsburg this week by R. H. Rush and C. F. Thompson and informed them that the Highway department was nearly ready to let the contract.

Only a few days will ensue from the time the bids are advertised for until the contract is let. That will probably mean that work will begin this fall. Winter of course will prevent its completion until some time next spring.

Hastings and Piper have the contract for a portion of the road leading from First street on McKean avenue to Maple Creek. The road has been in very bad shape.

HUNTERS HAVE BAD WEAPONS

Long Range Guns Used, Asserts Game Official

PEOPLE COMPLAINING

Protests are pouring into the office of the State Game Commission against the practice of hunters using high-power rifles for hunting deer and other large game this fall, but the State authorities say that they are unable to take any action to prevent it. The law prohibits the use of "pump guns," but there is nothing to stop a man from using an army rifle that will kill at four miles.

Dr. Joseph Kalbfus, secretary of the State Game Commission said that he had been in the South Mountain region and had found many people complaining that hunters showed no inclination to use ordinary guns this fall. "Last year," said the doctor "men went hunting with rifles that kill at distances of miles and people's lives were endangered. The State can do nothing under the present laws and all we can do is request that high power rifles should not be employed. What we need is a law prohibiting their use or restricting them to uninhabited districts. They should not be allowed on State reserves."

ELIMINATING WASTE.

It has been truly stated that if every family watched details as carefully in regard to waste as big corporations, the income of that family could be stretched one-half. This is probably true, as domestic economy is as much of a science as industrial economy, and the same principles intelligently applied will work as well in one branch as another.

In most families there is more or less waste in regard to food and clothing. Much food is thrown out each day that could be used to advantage. A local garbage collector once said that he could tell the wasteful families of the town by their garbage cans. It is not an uncommon thing for a family to throw away half or a quarter of a loaf of bread because it is stale. Indeed, so common is this practice, that children make regular rounds from house to house collecting stale bread for chicken and pig feed. In clothing, too, most people do not exercise much care. Children are not impressed with the importance of taking care of their wearing apparel, and this too, adds to the family expense and the high cost of living.

It has been said of the old Carnegie Steel company that it had a cost system so effectual that they counted the nails, the bricks and even the grains of sand used in their construction work. Nothing was wasted, and thousands of dollars were saved which other similar concerns lost in waste. The family that wastes a loaf of bread a week throws away the price of a pair of shoes for one of the children in the course of a year. This is only one item, and if a close watch were kept it is probable that enough could be saved in the average family that is now wasted to cover the whole shoe bill of each member for the year. Big concerns are not above exercising these small economies and it is to the interest of each family to do the same.

Just now the elimination of waste is one of the most important factors in social and domestic economy.

HOW IT WILL WORK.

Every article of foreign manufacionture sold in this country means one less article of home manufacture to be sold and so much less work for American workmen, says the Springfield, Mass., Union. With a large part of our working population out of employment there will be so much less money in circulation. The butcher the baker, the clothier, the dry goods dealer, every storekeeper and business man and every professional man will find his business falling off because the people will not have as much money to spend for their ordinary needs.

That is what will happen if the protection policy is abandoned. That was what happened in 1893 under the Wilson-Gorman tariff-for-revenue-only, and the country was glad after four years of hard times and business depression to return to the Republican protection policy. A vote for Taft will insure the continuance of the present prosperous conditions.

PICKED UP IN PASSING

Like every Bostonian Newton Newkirk, editor of the Bingville Bugle, the National Sportsman and compiler of the "All Sorts" column in the Boston Post is intensely interested in the world's series. And interested this former Beallsville man cannot help but put his "thinks" of the game on paper. In a story in Thursday's Boston Post Newkirk told how he witnessed the game from a telephone pole. He says:

"You never saw so many fan-atics in your life. 'Pray, how far does this line go?' says I to a gentleman near the box office. 'All I can say is,' says he, 'that I got on the end of this line at Chelsea yesterday afternoon, and I've been walkin' all night!'"

"Course I couldn't walk half way to Somerville to find the end of the line so I said to the man two spaces ahead of him, 'Say, Mister, is your name Smith?' 'No,' says he, 'my name ain't Smith—it's Jones.' 'Ah!' says I; 'I meant Jones. Well, sir—do you know your wife is very ill?' 'My wife—ill' he gasps. 'Yessir—took awfully ill just after you left home for the game. Told me to tell you to beat it right home if you want to see her alive! Gee, I've had a fierce time finding you?' 'Poor, dear wife!' he murmured, as he slipped out of the line and hurried away. When he slipped out, I slipped in. Let me tell you there's a devoted husband—a husband who would miss one of the World's Series to hurry to the bedside of a sick wife is some husband."

"Well, when the umpire hollers, 'Play ball!' a nice, new fresh, white ball that has never felt the brutal wallop of a bat is tossed to the pitcher. The pitcher paws up the dirt like an angry bull, rubs the ball with it, spits on his hands, reaches his mitt up into the atmosphere, yawns, expectorates on the ball, spits on his hands, turns his; back on the man at the bat so the latter won't see him twisting his phelanges around the ball, faces the batter again, glares at him in contempt for a minute, spits on the ball again, holds it as hight above his head as he can reach, stands on one foot, places his other foot in the small of his back, gives his neck four complete turns like an owl, makes a frantic gesture with both hands to high heaven, gives an imitation of a man suffering with acute cramps, doubles himself up like a summer squash, sticks his tongue out at the batter, rolls his eyes around the bases, turns a back flip-flop—and throws the ball.

"The man at the bat tries to kill the ball—he tries to knock it into an oblate spheroid and send it across the Charles River. Then while the outfielders are swimming across after it he makes a home run and the audience bust its lungs.

"If a batter runs all around the raspberry bush and gets back to where he started the same day, that counts one.

"When three men are out the other side comes to bat—and vice versa.

"Sometimes a batsman gets his base on balls—if the pitcher hits him until he hollers he also gets his base—on bawls.

"A game consists of nine innings—of course if the score is tied, the weather favorable and the audience willing, the game could be played all night—if it were not so blamed dark at night."

BROUGHT TO LIGHT

Charleroi People Receiving the Full Benefit.

There have been many cases like the following in Charleroi. Everyone relates the experience of people we know. These plain, straightforward statements will do much toward relieving the suffering of thousands. Such testimony will be read with interest by many people.

Mrs. Charles Bromwich, 714 Washington avenue. Charleroi, Pa., says: "About two years ago I had a severe attack of kidney disease and suffered a great deal from pains in the small of my back. I was also subject to headaches and a feeling of languor and although I tried a number of remedies, I was not helped. Doan's Kidney Pills were finally recommended to me, and deciding to try them I procured a box at Piper Bros.' Drug Store. In a few days after using this remedy, I felt a great deal better and before long a complete cure was effected. Doan's Kidney Pills have my highest endorsement." (Statement given September 30, 1907.)

CURED PERMANENTLY.

On November 6, 1909, Mrs. Bromwich said: "I can recommend Doan's Kidney Pills as highly today as when I gave a public statement in their favor two years ago. The cure this remedy effected has been permanent."

Believes This Will "Cure Lung Troubles"

Consumption is a flattering disease—that is one of its chief dangers. Those who have it are rarely willing to acknowledge the fact. If this trouble is present, it is no time for trifling. If a so-called "cold" has long persisted; if a cough is present that keeps you anxious, or any of the symptoms are present, such as fever or night sweats, weakness and loss of appetite, and perhaps some raising of mucus—do the sensible thing: —take Eckman's Alterative—as Mr. Bettersworth did

"Gentlemen: I wish to say for your Alterative that I believe it to be a medicine of unequaled value for all Bronchial and Lung Trouble. The Spring of 1908, I had a severe cough for six months. I tried all the medicine that my doctors recommended to me, but no results came for the better. I had night sweats, and would cough and spit until I got so weak I could hardly do anything. But, at last, James Deering, of Glasgow Junction, insisted that I try your medicine. In one week's time there was quite an improvement in my condition, and after I had taken several bottles, I felt as well as ever in my life.

"I desire the world to know that I firmly believe that your Eckman's Alterative will cure any case of lung trouble if taken before the last stage. I will gladly write personally to any party wanting information in regard to your wonderful medicine." (Sworn Affidavit)

A. C. BETTERSWORTH.

Eckman's Alterative is effective in Bronchitis, Asthma, Hay Fever, Throat and Lung Troubles, and in upbuilding the system. Does not contain poisons, opiates or habit-forming drugs. Ask for booklet telling of recoveries, and write to Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for more evidence. For sale by all leading druggists

A JOINT RESOLUTION

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met, That the following is proposed as an amendment to the Constitution of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, in accordance with the provisions of the eighteenth article thereof:—

Article IX.

Section 15. No obligations which have been heretofore issued, or which may hereafter be issued, by any county or municipality, other than Philadelphia, to provide for the construction or acquisition of waterworks, subways, underground railways or street railways, or the appurtenances thereof, shall be considered as a debt of a municipality, within the meaning of section eight of article nine of the Constitution of Pennsylvania or of this amendment, if the net revenue derived from said property for a period of five years, either before or after the acquisition thereof, or, where the same is constructed by the county or municipality, after the completion thereof, shall have been sufficient to pay interest and sinking-fund charges during said period upon said obligations or if the said obligations shall be secured by liens upon the respective properties and shall impose no municipal liability. Where municipalities of counties shall issue obligations to provide for the construction of property, as herein provided, said municipalities or counties may also issue obligations to provide for the interest and sinking-fund charges accruing thereon until said properties shall have been completed and in operation for a period of one year; and said municipalities and counties shall not be required to levy a tax to pay said interest and sinking-fund charges, as required by section ten of article nine of the Constitution of Pennsylvania, until after said properties shall have been operated by said counties or municipalities during said period of one year. Any of the said municipalities or counties may incur indebtedness in excess of seven per centum, and not exceeding ten per centum of the assessed valuation of the taxable property therein, if such excess of indebtedness shall have been assented to by three-fifths of the electors voting at a public election, in such manner as shall be provided by law.

A Wager Won.

The following story is told of J. P Morgan—and possibly of other successful business men as well. For three consecutive days the great financier carried an empty birdcage in his hand to and from his office. On the third day one of his managers ventured to ask why he carried that apparently useless article.

"To see," replied Pierpont Morgan, "if any one would have the impudence to ask me why I did so."

"I beg your pardon," began the inquirer. "I"—

"You needn't do that," said the chief, smiling grimly. "I had a bet with a man that I had at least one employee with some curiosity. I've won the money; but in future don't ask questions about things that don't concern you!"

Futility of Education.

An eminent physician, at a recent convention of railway surgeons in Philadelphia, said of a safety device that has averted many railway accidents:

"The advantage of this device is now almost universally recognized. Indeed, the railroader who disputes its advantages is as antiquated as the old resident of who said:

"'Education be hanged. Thar's young Bill Smithers took an engineerin' course in a correspondence school and then put up a sign on his carriage house and hadn't no better sense than to spell "carriage" "garage."'"—Exchange.

Force and Perseverance.

There are two ways of attaining an important end—force and perseverance. Force falls to the lot only of the privileged few, but austere and sustained perseverance can be practiced by the most insignificant. Its silent power grows irresistible with time.—Mme. Swetchine.

Gymnasium Training.

Every person who has received gymnasium training is aware of the fact that an exercise which calls for painful effort on the part of the beginner is often performed almost without any conscious effort at all after a certain amount of training has been received. Again, it is perfectly well known that brute strength alone does not make a gymnast and that even a simple exercise may offer great difficulty to a muscular and well developed individual who has not been trained in the gymnasium. The explanation for this is made in an article by Professor Du Bois Reymond in Die Umshau, who points out that one of the essential functions of gymnastum work is not so much to build up muscle as to train nerves and nerve groups to work in proper unison and co-ordination.

Flags at Half Mast.

Ever since flags were used in war it has been the custom to have the flag of the superior or conquering nation above that of the inferior or vanquished. When an army found itself hopelessly beaten it hauled its flag down far enough for the flag of the victors to be placed above it on the same pole. This was a token not only of submission, but of respect. In those days when a famous soldier died flags were lowered out of respect to his memory. The custom long ago passed from purely military usage to public life of all kinds, the flag flying at half mast being a sign that the dead man was worthy of universal respect. The space left above it is for the flag of the great conqueror of all, the angel of death.

One Good Way.

"My wife," said Mr. Clarke, "sent $2 in answer to an advertisement of a sure method of getting rid of superfluous fat."

"And what did she get for the money? Was the information what she wanted?" asked Mr. Simmons.

"Well, she got a reply, telling her to sell it to the soap man."—Harper's Monthly.

He Guessed Right.

"Ah, me," exclaimed Mrs. Nagget, "my shopping was most unsatisfactory today!"

"Yes, dear. I was after a birthday gift for you."—Philadelphia Press.

Quite a Change.

Howell—Rowell doesn't speak to his wife. Powell—And I can remember when he thought it was worth $1 to say a few words to her by long distance telephone.—Judge.

East Indian Muslin Test.

"None of this is fine enough," he said. "In the turban I have on there are forty yards. But forty yards of this would give me a head like a saratoga trunk.

"Indian muslin is very, very fine. It must be fine enough to disappear if it is to pass our A1 test. The test is this: The muslin is spread on grass overnight. In the morning, when everything is dew drenched, if the muslin isn't practically identical with the dewy gossamer covering the lawns—in other words, if it isn't invisible—it is discarded and must be sold as 'seconds.'"—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

MEMORY OF SAVAGES.

Wonderful Feats of the Zulus in Conveying Verbal Messages.

The memory in savage or uncultivated peoples is often trained to a degree very surprising to those civilized men and women who have grown used to depending on the written much more than on the remembered word. The transmission of whole epics, like the "Iliad," by word of mouth no longer seems so incredible when you read of the feats of memory of which present day Zulus are capable.

These people, says Mr. Gibson in "The Story of the Zulus," have no writing and are accustomed to transmit messages and record events by memory alone. This they can do because their mental impressions are made especially distinct by reason of their acquired or inherited habit of giving undivided attention to the subject in hand.

Communications between the British authorities and the Zulu kings were almost invariably conducted by means of verbal messages carried by natives. A certain ultimatum addressed by the British to Cetywayo was conveyed to him, not upon paper, but in the brain cells of the messengers whom he had sent eighty miles to receive it from the British commissioners.

Although the document contained some 4,000 words and was accompanied by much comment on the state of things it was desired to remedy, the whole was repeated to Cetywayo with perfect accuracy.

MOVING PICTURES.

Why They Sometimes Show Wheels Turning the Wrong Way.

Every one must have noticed that in moving pictures the wheels of carriages or automobiles often seem to be turning backward instead of forward. One puzzled person wrote to the Scientific American asking why, and this is that paper's answer:

In taking a moving picture there are perhaps sixteen exposures made each second. If now the spokes of the wheel of a carriage move with a speed so that the spokes are in the same position at each exposure, that wheel will seem to stand still in the picture.

If the wheel is moving slower, then the spokes will be seen farther backward in the successive views, and the wheel will seem to turn backward, while it will seem to turn forward when the spokes move fast enough to occupy positions further forward in each exposure.

It is a matter of the interruption for the exposure and the motion of the wheel. If there are sixteen exposures and the wheel turns through the space between two spokes in one-sixteenth of a second the wheel would be in the same position at each successive exposure and so would not seem to move at all.

Bluejacket's Black Neckerchief.

It is not generally known that the bluejacket's black neckerchief, a survival of the service mourning for Nelson, is the best British silk obtainable and that the admiralty is a very fastidious customer. Two to each man are issued annually, and many thousands of these discarded scarfs have been subsequently worn by Jack's femininity. A pair of them make an excellent blouse.—Pall Mall Gazette.

A MUSICIAN'S ROMANCE.

Fanelli's Triumph, That Came After Thirty Years of Misery.

The life story of M. Fanelli, the composer of "Tableaux Symphoniques," reads like a romance. How easily it might have read like a tragedy this incident will show.

In his youth Fanelli had been courageous and ambitious, full of dreams of the music he was going to write for the world to hear and admire. But misfortune followed misfortune. He found it impossible to get a hearing for his compositions, and one by one his dreams began to fade.

Ten, twenty, thirty years went by. Fanelli, all hope crushed by continued adversity, was earning a pittance by playing night after night in an orchestra. None of his colleagues suspected his genius, for he kept his ambitions locked in his heart, as he kept the symphony, the masterpiece of his youth, locked in his desk.

Then one day Fanelli, in search of work as a copyist, called upon Gabriel Pierne, one of the great musical celebrities of Paris. Asked to show a sample of his writing, Fanelli produced the symphony, which he had brought with him. Pierne looked at it and saw that the writing was clear; then he saw something more, for he continued reading the music eagerly.

"Who is this Fanelli?" he asked at length.

"Myself," answered the composer. "I wrote it nearly thirty years ago."

"Leave this with me and come again in a few days."

So Fanelli went out, while Pierne, too enrapt to say goodby, stood by the window, poring over the music. A few days later he announced to the delighted but dazed Fanelli that he was going to produce the symphony at one of the Concerts Colonne.

On the eventful night Fanelli himself took a seat with the musicians. Tears came into his eyes as he heard the first strains of his work, neglected for so many years. He was not alone in his emotion, however, for as the music proceeded tears came into the eyes of the other musicians, the director, the audience. The music took them by storm. When was over a burst of applause broke out, rose and swelled and would not die away. The composer alone sat quiet, as if in deep thought. Finally he got up, walked over to Pierne, and with a full heart expressed his gratitude.

"Again I thank you, M. Pierne," he said, taking his leave, "Good night, and a good appetite to you."

Pierne wondered at this strange farewell, but at last the meaning dawned on him. The applause that was still ringing through the hall had brought to Fanelli not only fame, but what for the moment was of even more importance to him, the promise of easier living. The composer of "Tableaux Symphoniques" had left the scene of his triumph to enjoy a much needed and rare treat—a good dinner.—Youth's Companion.

Self Conscious Greatness.

One day in the train—on one of Victor Hugo's journeys to or from Brussels—he happened to find himself in the company of two English ladies who spoke French. Hugo knew but one word of English—Christmas, which he always pronounced "Christmus." In the course of conversation these ladies observed that it must be inconvenient for him not to know English when he was passing through that country. To which the great man's reply was, "When England wants to talk with me she will learn my language!" "From their astonishment at this answer," said Hugo in relating the story, "it was evident they did not know who I was!"—"Victor Hugo, His Life and Work," by A. F. Davidson.

Echoes From Horses' Skulls.

Those curious twists and turns superstitions take are to be found in the introduction of horses' skulls in or about the church buildings in England and Scotland, the reason alleged being to help the sound in church. This habit is unquestionably a relic of heathenism where an animal was sacrificed. Some years ago, when an old meeting house in Edinburgh was pulled down, the sounding board space above the pulpit was found to be filled with horses' skulls. In some parts of England there still exists the idea that if a horse's head is buried in a field there will be an echo.

Quite Frank About It.

"So you are going to marry Tom?"

"You saw the announcement, didn't you?"

"Yes, but"—

"It wasn't a fake."

"But, dearie—I never thought that Tom would be your choice."

"Tom ain't my choice. He's my chance. Have you any other questions to ask, darling?"

Darling decided she hadn't.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Energy of Will.

Energy of will is the soul of every great character. Where it is there is resolute character; where it is not there is faintness, with effeminacy, despondency, neglect of duty and failure. "The strong man and the waterfall," says a proverb, "channel their own path."

In Training.

Nell—Why does she always dress in black? Belle—She's in training. Nell—Training for what? Belle—Well, you see, she married an octogenarian.—Philadelphia Record.

Opponents think that they refute us when they repeat their own opinions and take no notice of ours.—Goethe.

A LITERARY RIDDLE.

Who Was It Wrote the Tragedy of "Troilus and Cressida?"

Andrew Lang has just propounded a puzzle in circumstantial evidence. "Who," he asks, "wrote 'Troilus and Cressida?'" You may answer, as you please, Shakespeare or Bacon. If you answer Bacon, Andrew Lang comes back with the query, "Would Bacon have said that Aristotle lived before the Trojan war?" Bacon was too learned a man to make such a mistake, which would be as bad as placing Abraham Lincoln among the signers of the Declaration of Independence.

If you answer Shakespeare, Andrew Lang shoots another query at you: "The author makes Ulysses and Achilles quote 'an author' and discuss a pretty long and strange passage from that author, who was Plato How could Shakespeare have read Plato?" For Shakespeare knew no Greek, and in his day Plato had not yet been translated into English.

It is quite conceivable that Shakespeare might imagine that Plato and Aristotle lived many centuries before Homer, but it is inconceivable that the erudite Bacon should fall into such an error.

Andrew Lang does not pretend to solve the riddle He frankly says, "I give it up."—New York World.

RISKY POSTAL SERVICE.

In Russia the Government Opens All Suspicious Packages.

Our own service of mails is well organized. There is little doubt in the mind of the average person that when he posts a letter it will reach its destination.

But in other lands he might well fear for its safety. In Russia, for instance, any letter or parcel that is regarded with suspicion is immediately opened and its contents noted. A clever machine gums it up again, so that the recipient does not know that it has been tampered with.

In Lapland the mails are carried in sledges drawn by reindeers. In the wilds of the Caucasus the postman holds a post of danger. He must be protected against brigands and against the weather, for he often has to climb mountains more than 12,000 feet high.

Asiatic Russia, which is apt to be marshy, has the buffalo post, and, of course, the progress made is very slow. Buffaloes are more powerful than oxen, and they are also used in Siberia for carrying the mail.

Other postmen in foreign lands are the swimming postman of India and the skiing letter carrier of the Andes. For the latter place the Argentine government specially imports Norwegians.—Exchange.

Mexico's Smoking Mountain.

In 1897 I climbed two volcanoes in Mexico, Popocatepetl, or "the smoking mountain," about 17,800 feet, and Orizaba, the former the most famous because within view from Mexico City and thus a source of especial pride and admiration to the inhabitants, who have been loath to believe that any other of their mountains could be higher. Popo has a really splendid crater, about half a mile across and 1,000 feet deep. The walls are generally vertical, but in one or two places it is possible to descend. When workers are engaged in collecting sulphur machinery is used to hoist them up and down From Popo's summit there is a glorious prospect, not alone of the immense crater, but of the beautiful "White Lady" (Iztaccihuatl) reclining a thousand feet below, of Orizaba on the far horizon and of the charming valley of Mexico.—Annie S. Peck in Christian Herald.

Wellington's Integrity.

The Duke of Wellington was noted for his rigid integrity. Here is an instance which occurred in reference to his large estate. Some farm adjoining his lands was for sale, and his agent negotiated for him for the purchase. Having concluded the business, he went to the duke and told him he had made a capital bargain. "What do you mean?" asked the duke. "Why your grace, I have got the farm for so much, and I know it to be worth at least so much more." "Are you quite sure of that?" "Quite sure, your grace, for I have carefully surveyed it." "Very well, then; pay the gentleman from me the balance between what you have already given and the real value of the estate."

Strong Circumstantial Evidence.

A young wife was in tears a few mornings ago when her mother called. When asked what was the matter she replied that her husband was out late the night before and had been to a drinking party.

"What makes you think he had been to a drinking party?" asked the mother.

More Careful Now.

The young wife had given her husband a dance. "You've improved wonderfully, Jack," she said as they sat down. "Don't you remember how you used to tear my dress?"

"Yes," he replied. "I wasn't buying them then."—Boston Transcript.

can ranks. New members are being enrolled right along by the local Republican club, and everything is in good shape. The committee in charge of the arrangements started enthusiastically to work this morning and all are determined that Charleroi will again sustain her reputation for doing things by making this demonstration the big political event of the campaign in the Monongahela valley.

SPECIAL FEATURE AT THE COYLE

A one-reel feature at the Coyle Theatre next Thursday. King Baggot as a parson comes to Tennessee mountain village to a cabin where a brother and sister live with their old father. The two men are engaged in moonshining, and the girl is in sympathy with them. The brother suspects the parson of being a revenue officer and attempts to drive him away, but is frustrated. One day the parson comes across the still and endeavors to disuade the men f rom their illegeal practice. But for the girl he would have been shot. Later, he makes another trip to the still, where he is surprised by revenue officers. Rather than betray the men he serves a year in the penitentary, when he returns and marries the pretty sister of the moonshiner.

This is the first picture to be produced for the Imp Company by Mr. James Kirkwood. The acting is strong and in conformity to conditions of a Tennessee village. The characterization is very apt and the work of Miss Jane Fearnley as the moonshiner's sister is particularly well done.

OCTOBER 30 DATE FOR BIG REPUBLICAN RALLY

SECURING SPEAKERS

Gov. J. K. Tener to Procure Services of Notable Men Throughout Country

With an efficient and active executive committee at work, perparations are in progress for a mammoth Republican rally to be held in Charleroi on Wednesday evening, October 30. This will be the biggest demonstration that will be held in Washington county during the campaign, and it is being planned with a magnitude that will include the whole Monongahela valley, and will take in portions of Westmoreland and Fayette counties. Some topliner speakers, including Governor Tener, will be scheduled and the enthusiasm that will be let loose on that occasion will show to the country at large that the Grand Old Party has not lost its grip in the greatest manufacturing district in the whole United States.

Arrangements for this big demonstration, which will wind up the Republican campaign in the Monongahela valley, were started at a meeting of the Charleroi Republican club held in the Bank of Charleroi Hall Friday evening. An enthusiastic band of workers responded to the call of President J. J. Hott to make the arrangements and all entered into the work with a spirit that insures is success. Plans were offered and discussed and action was taken by appointing an executive committee composed of Charles O. Frye, chairman, who had previously been elected chief marshal of the club, J. J. Hott, J. W. Mathias, J. K. Rickey, R. H. Rush, W. R. Gaut, and D. M. McCloskey. This committee will appoint all the subsidiary committees necessary to complete the details of the demonstration.

The general plan to be followed out is along similar lines when Governor J. K. Tener opened his gubernatorial campaign in Charleroi two years ago. All the towns and communities are to be specially invited to participate, and an organized effort will be made to bring big delegations to take part in the parade. Special trains and street cars will be run and every effort made to provide means to bring the largest crowd to Charleroi that ever assembled in honor of the Grand Old Party.

Governor J. K. Tener has signified his intention of being present, and has volunteered to secure some speakers who are among the topliners of the country. These have not yet been definitely decided upon, but names like J. Aden Bede, Congressman J. Hampton Moore, Senator William E. Crow, and others are mentioned. At all events some of the most prominent speakers will be secured and all the local celebrities of the vicinity will also be invited.

President Hott announced that the Republican headquarters over the Sample Shoe store have been opened and will be available until after election. A poll is being taken of the voters which shows that there are no serious defections from the Republi-

BRIDGE MAY BE STARTED

Exceptions Withdrawn in Brownsville Proceedings

LAST OBSTACLE GONE

Word has been received by the Commissioners of Fayette county that the exceptions which had been filed in the matter of the building of the new Brownsville bridge had been withdrawn and the proceeding before the Supreme court had been abandoned.

President John S. Langley of the Fayette county board states that the proposition will bet aken up immediately with the commissioners of Washington county, that a competent engineer will be employed and that work will start with the least delay possible.

This will be good news to the people of Brownsville. Ever since their old bridge was ordered razed by the War Department they have sorely felt the need of another structure. The traffic between Brownsville and West Brownsville is not heavy itself, but the inter-county traffic is constantly becoming heavier. As soon as the new bridge is ready for travel relief will come not only from the delays and dangers of the ferry system, but also from the burdensome tolls.

This is the removal of the last obstacle to this project which means so much to both Fayette and Washington counties.

TWO HAVE NARROW ESCAPE IN RUNAWAY

George Leppep, aged 62 years, president of the Moose Brewing company at Roscoe and Otto Koeniger, aged 42, brewmaster at the Moose brewery had a narrow escape from death in a runaway on Fifth street Thursday afternoon. The horse they were driving and which was a livery animal belonging to Dr. D.E. Kimmell of Charleroi was so injured that it had to be shot. The accident happened at Crest avenue and Fifth street.

Leppep and Koeniger had been to the residence of Joe Ghrist about three miles out of town to look at a team of horses for the brewing company. They were returning down Fifth street at Shady avenue, when for some reason the horse they were driving started on a jog trot. Apparently thinking the animal was frightened and fearing the consequences the men tried to stop it. They only served to increase the speed of the horse.

Down Fifth street to Meadow avenue it ran and then continued on down the steep hill at a faster gait. Leppep who was driving continued to draw and saw on the lines. He attempted to turn the horse out Crest avenue. Unable to control the buggy sufficiently to make the turn successful, the horse fell and skidded against the telephone pole at the corner of Fifth and Crest.

Both men were hurled from the buggy. The horse laid with its head down hill, one of its hind legs in the grating of the flush tank. Leppep had sustained the worst fall of the two men and was picked up in a dazed condition. The other man was able to care for himself. Leppep was carried into the home of C. C. Crill on Fifth street nearby, and Dr. J. Clive Enos and Dr. H. J. Repman called. His worst injuries were about the right side of his head and face. He had a severe cut above the right eye. It was feared at first that he would lose sight of this member, but prompt attention probably will result in it being saved. Mr. Leppep was taken to the Wellington Hotel and later in the evening proceeded to his home in McKeesport. Mr. Koeniger's worst injuries consisted of bruises. He had one of his limbs severely hurt.

The horse when it went into the grating of the flush tank had a hind leg broken. It sustained a deep cut between the two fore legs and a cut over an eye. Although it was one of the most valuable horses he had in his stable, Dr. Kimmell deemed it advisable to put it out of its misery and shot it himself. The animal was one he had used in his livery trade over five years.

WILL RECEIVE BIDS ON SPEERS ROAD

Advertisement to be Made by State Highway Department Next Week--Probable That Work Will Start This Fall

According to information received today the State Highway department will advertise next week for bids on the construction of that section of State Highway Route, No. 118, between the Maple Creek bridge at the end of McKean avenue and the Belle Vernon bridge at Speers. Gov. Tener was seen in Pittsburg this week by R. H. Rush and C. F. Thompson and informed them that the Highway department was nearly ready to let the contract.

Only a few days will ensue from the time the bids are advertised for until the contract is let. That will probably mean that work will begin this fall. Winter of course will prevent its completion until some time next spring.

Hastings and Piper have the contract for a portion of the road leading from First street on McKean avenue to Maple Creek. The road has been in very bad shape.

HUNTERS HAVE BAD WEAPONS

Long Range Guns Used, Asserts Game Official

PEOPLE COMPLAINING

Protests are pouring into the office of the State Game Commission against the practice of hunters using high-power rifles for hunting deer and other large game this fall, but the State authorities say that they are unable to take any action to prevent it. The law prohibits the use of "pump guns," but there is nothing to stop a man from using an army rifle that will kill at four miles.

Dr. Joseph Kalbfus, secretary of the State Game Commission said that he had been in the South Mountain region and had found many people complaining that hunters showed no inclination to use ordinary guns this fall. "Last year," said the doctor "men went hunting with rifles that kill at distances of miles and people's lives were endangered. The State can do nothing under the present laws and all we can do is request that highpower rifles should not be employed. What we need is a law prohibiting their use or restricting them to uninhabited districts. They should not be allowed on State reserves."

ELIMINATING WASTE.

It has been truly stated that if every family watched details as carefully in regard to waste as big corporations, the income of that family could be stretched one-half. This is probably true, as domestic economy is as much of a science as industrial economy, and the same principles intelligently applied will work as well in one branch as another.

In most families there is more or less waste in regard to food and clothing. Much food is thrown out each day that could be used to advantage. A local garbage collector once said that he could tell the wasteful families of the town by their garbage cans. It is not an uncommon thing for a family to throw away half or a quarter of a loaf of bread because it is stale. Indeed, so common is this practice, that children make regular rounds from house to house collecting stale bread for chicken and pig feed. In clothing, too, most people do not exercise much care. Children are not impressed with the importance of taking care of their wearing apparel, and this too, adds to the family expense and the high cost of living.

It has been said of the old Carnegie Steel company that it had a cost system so effectual that they counted the nails, the bricks and even the grains of sand used in their construction work. Nothing was wasted, and thousands of dollars were saved which other similar concerns lost in waste. The family that wastes a loaf of bread a week throws away the price of a pair of shoes for one of the children in the course of a year. This is only one item, and if a close watch were kept it is probable that enough could be saved in the average family that is now wasted to cover the whole shoe bill of each member for the year. Big concerns are not above exercising these small economics and it is to the interest of each family to do the same.

PICKED UP IN PASSING

Like every Bostonian Nenton Newkirk, editor of the Bingville Bugle, the National Sportsman and compiler of the "All Sorts" column in the Boston Post is intensely interested in the world's series. And interested this former Beallsville man cannot help but put his "thinks" of the game on paper. In a story in Thursday's Boston Post Newkirk told how he witnessed the game from a telephone pole. He says:

"You never saw so many fanatics in your life. 'Pray, how far does this line go?' says I to a gentleman near the box office. 'All I can say is,' says he, 'that I got on the end of this line at Chelsea yesterday afternoon, and I've been walkin' all night!'"

"Course I couldn't walk half way to Somerville to find the end of the line so I said to the man two spaces ahead of him, 'Say, Mister, is your name Smith?' 'No,' says he, 'my name ain't Smith—it's Jones.' 'Ah!' says I; 'I meant Jones. Well, sir—do you know your wife is very ill?' 'My wife—ill' he gasps. 'Yessir—took awfully ill just after you left home for the game. Told me to tell you to beat it right home if you want to see her alive! Gee, I've had a fierce time finding you?' 'Poor, dear wife!' he murmured, as he slipped out of the line and hurried away. When he slipped out, I slipped in. Let me tell you there's a devoted husband—a husband who would miss one of the World's Series to hurry to the bedside of a sick wife is some husband."

"Well, when the umpire hollers, 'Play ball!' a nice, new fresh, white ball that has never felt the brutal wallop of a bat is tossed to the pitcher. The pitcher paws up the dirt like an angry bull, rubs the ball with it, spits on his hands, reaches his mitt up into the atmosphere, yawns, expectorates on the ball, spits on his hands, turns his back on the man at the bat so the latter won't see him twisting his phelanges around the ball, faces the batter again, glares at him in contempt for a minute, spits on the ball again, holds it as hight above his head as he can reach, stands on one foot, places his other foot in the small of his back, gives his neck four complete turns like an owl, makes a frantic gesture with both hands to high heaven, gives an imitation of a man suffering with acute cramps, doubles himself up like a summer squash, sticks his tongue out at the batter, rolls his eyes around the bases, turns a back flip-flop—and throws the ball.

"The man at the bat tries to kill the ball—he tries to knock it into an oblate spheroid and send it across the Charles River. Then while the outfielders are swimming across after it he makes a home run and the audience bust its lungs.

"If a batter runs all around the raspberry bush and gets back to where he started the same day, that counts one.

"When three men are out the other side comes to bat—and vice versa.

"Sometimes a batsman gets his base on balls—if the pitcher hits him until he hollers he also gets his base—on bawls.

"A game consists of nine innings—of course if the score is tied, the weather favorable and the audience willing, the game could be played all night—if it were not so blamed dark at night."

Mrs. Charles Bromwich, 714 Washington avenue, Charleroi, Pa., says: "About two years ago I had a severe attack of kidney disease and suffered a great deal from pains in the small of my back. Believes This Will "Cure Lung Troubles"

Consumption is a flattering disease—that is one of its chief dangers. Those who have it are rarely willing to acknowledge the fact. If this trouble is present, it is no time for trifling. If a so-called cold has long persisted; if a cough is present that keeps you anxious, or any of the symptoms are present, such as fever or night sweats, weakness and loss of appetite, and perhaps some raising of mucus—do the sensible thing:—take Eckman's Alterative—as Mr. Bettersworth did

"Gentlemen: I wish to say for your Alterative that I believe it to be a medicine of unequaled value for all Bronchial and Lung Trouble. The Spring of 1908, I had a severe cough for six months. I tried all the medicine that my doctors recommended to me, but no results came for the better. I had night sweats, and would cough and spit until I got so weak I could hardly do anything. But, at last, James Deering, of Glasgow Junction, insisted that I try your medicine. In one week's time there was quite an improvement in my condition, and after I had taken several bottles, I felt as well as ever in my life.

"I desire the world to know that I firmly believe that your Eckman's Alterative will cure any case of lung trouble if taken before the last stage. I will gladly write personally to any party wanting information in regard to your wonderful medicine." (Sworn Affidavit)

A. C. BETTERSWORTH.

A Wager Won.

The following story is told of J. P Morgan—and possibly of other successful business men as well. For three consecutive days the great financier carried an empty birdcage in his hand to and from his office. On the third day one of his managers ventured to ask why he carried that apparently useless article.

"To see," replied Pierpont Morgan, "if any one would have the impudence to ask me why I did so."

"I beg your pardon," began the inquirer. "I"—

"You needn't do that," said the chief, smiling grimly. "I had a bet with a man that I had at least one employee with some curiosity. I've won the money; but in future don't ask questions about things that don't concern you!"

Futility of Education.

An eminent physician, at a recent convention of railway surgeons in Philadelphia, said of a safety device that has averted many railway accidents:

"The advantage of this device is now almost universally recognized. Indeed, the railroader who disputes its advantages is as antiquated as the old resident fer who said:

"'Edication be hanged. Thar's young Bill Smithers took an engineerin' course in a correspondence school and then put up a sign on his carriage house and hadn't no better sense than to spell "carriage" "garage."'"—Exchange.

Force and Perseverance.

There are two ways of attaining an important end—force and perseverance. Force falls to the lot only of the privileged few, but austere and sustained perseverance can be practiced by the most insignificant. Its silent power grows irresistible with time.—Mme. Pwetchine.

Gymnasium Training.

Every person who has received gymnasium training is aware of the fact that an exercise which calls for painful effort on the part of the beginner is often performed almost without any conscious effort at all after a certain amount of training has been received. Again, it is perfectly well known that brute strength alone does not make a gymnast and that even a simple exercise may offer great difficulty to a muscular and well developed individual who has not been trained in the gymnasium. The explanation for this is made in an article by Professor Dubois Reymond in Die Umshau, who points out that one of the essential functions of gymnasium work is not so much to build up muscle as to train nerves and nerve groups to work in proper unison and co-ordination

Flags at Half Mast.

Ever since flags were used in war it has been the custom to have the flag of the superior or conquering nation above that of the inferior or vanquished. When an army found itself hopelessly beaten it hauled its flag down far enough for the flag of the victors to be placed above it on the same pole. This was a token not only of submission, but of respect. In those [illegible] were lowered out of respect to his memory. The custom long ago passed from purely military usage to public life of all kinds, the flag flying at half mast being a sign that the dead man was worthy of universal respect. The space left above it is for the flag of the great conqueror of all, the angel of death.

One Good Way.

"My wife," said Mr. Clarke, "sent $2 in answer to an advertisement of a sure method of getting rid of superfluous fat."

"And what did she get for the money? Was the information what she wanted?" asked Mr. Simmons.

"Well, she got a reply telling her to sell it to the soap man."—Harper's Monthly.

He Guessed Right.

"Ah, me," exclaimed Mrs. Nagget, "my shopping was most unsatisfactory today!"

"Yes, dear. I was after a birthday gift for you"—Philadelphia Press.

Quite a Change.

Howell—Powell doesn't speak to his wife. Powell—And I can remember when he thought it was worth $1 to say a few words to her by long distance telephone.—Judge.

East Indian Muslin Test.

"None of this is fine enough," he said. "In the turban I have on there are forty yards. But forty yards of this would give me a head like a saratoga trunk.

"Indian muslin is very, very fine. It must be fine enough to disappear if it is to pass our A1 test. The test is this: The muslin is spread on grass overnight. In the morning, when everything is dew drenched, if the muslin isn't practically identical with the dewy gossamer covering the lawns—in other words, if it isn't invisible—it is discarded and must be sold as 'seconds.'"—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

MEMORY OF SAVAGES.

Wonderful Feats of the Zulus in Conveying Verbal Messages.

The memory in savage [illegible] gree very surprising to those civilized men and women who have grown to depending on the written message more than on the remembered word. The transmission of whole epics, like the "Iliad," by word of mouth no longer seems so incredible when you read of the feats of memory of which present day Zulus are capable.

These people, says Mr. Gibson in "The Story of the Zulus," have no writing and are accustomed to transmit messages and record events by memory alone. This they can do because their mental impressions are made especially distinct by reason of their acquired or inherited habit of giving undivided attention to the subject in hand.

Communications between the British authorities and the Zulu kings were almost invariably conducted by means of verbal messages carried by natives. A certain ultimatum addressed by the British to Cetywayo was conveyed to him, not upon paper, but in the brain cells of the messengers whom he had [illegible] British commissioners.

Although the document contained some 4,000 words and was accompanied by much comment on the state of things it was desired to remedy, the whole was repeated to Cetywayo with perfect accuracy.

MOVING PICTURES.

Why They Sometimes Show Wheels Turning the Wrong Way.

Every one must have noticed that in moving pictures the wheels of carriages or automobiles often seem to be turning backward instead of forward. One puzzled person wrote to the Scientific American asking why, and this is that paper's answer:

In taking a moving picture there are perhaps sixteen exposures made each second. If now the spokes of the wheel of a carriage move with a speed so that the spokes are in the same position at each exposure, that wheel will seem to stand still in the picture.

If the wheel is moving slower, then the spokes will be seen farther backward in the successive views, and the wheel will seem to turn backward, while it will seem to turn forward when the spokes move fast enough to occupy positions further forward in each exposure.

It is a matter of the interruption for the exposure and the motion of the wheel. If there are sixteen exposures and the wheel turns through the space between two spokes in one-sixteenth of a second the wheel would be in the same position at each successive exposure and so would not seem to move at all.

Bluejacket's Black Neckerchief.

It is not generally known that the bluejacket's black neckerchief, a survival of the service mourning for Nelson, is the best British silk obtainable and that the admiralty is a very fastidious customer. Two to each man are issued annually, and many thousands of these discarded scarfs have been subsequently worn by Jack's femininity. A pair of them make an excellent blouse.—Pall Mall Gazette.

A MUSICIAN'S ROMANCE

Fanelli's Triumph, Past Came After Thirty Years of Misery.

The life story of M. Fanelli, the composer of "Tableaux Symphoniques," reads like a romance. How easily it might have read like a tragedy this incident will show.

In his youth Fanelli had been courageous and ambitious, full of dreams of the music he was going to write for the world to hear and admire. But misfortune followed misfortune. He found it impossible to get a hearing for his compositions, and one by one his dreams began to fade.

Ten, twenty, thirty years went by, Fanelli, all hope crushed by continued adversity, was earning a pittance by playing night after night in an orchestra. None of his colleagues suspected his genius, for he kept his ambitions locked in his heart, as he kept the symphony, the masterpiece of his youth, locked in his desk.

Then one day Fanelli, in search of work as a copyist, called upon Gabriel Pierne, one of the great musical celebrities of Paris. Asked to show a sample of his writing, Fanelli produced the symphony, which he had brought with him. Pierne looked at it and saw that the writing was clear; then he saw something more, for he continued reading the music eagerly.

"Who is this Fanelli?" he asked at length.

"Myself," answered the composer. "I wrote it nearly thirty years ago."

"Leave this with me and come again in a few days."

So Fanelli went out, while Pierne, too enrapt to say goodby, stood by the window, poring over the music. A few days later he announced to the delighted but dazed Fanelli that he was going to produce the symphony at one of the Concerts Colonne.

On the eventful night Fanelli himself took a seat with the musicians. Tears came into his eyes as he heard the first strains of his work, neglected for so many years. He was not alone in his emotion, however, for as the music proceeded tears came into the eyes of the other musicians, the director, the audience. The music took them by storm. When was over a burst of applause broke out, rose and swelled and would not die away. The composer alone sat quiet, as if in deep thought. Finally he got up, walked over to Pierne, and with a full heart expressed his gratitude.

"Again I thank you, M. Pierne," he said, taking his leave, "Good night, and a good appetite to you."

Pierne wondered at this strange farewell, but at last the meaning dawned on him. The applause that was still ringing through the hall had brought to Fanelli not only fame, but what for the moment was of even more importance to him, the promise of easier living. The composer of "Tableaux Symphoniques" had left the scene of his triumph to enjoy a much needed and rare treat—a good dinner.—Youth's Companion.

Self Conscious Greatness.

One day in the train—on one of Victor Hugo's journeys to or from Brussels—he happened to find himself in the company of two English ladies who spoke French. Hugo knew but one word of English—Christmas, which he always pronounced "Christmus." In the course of conversation these ladies observed that it must be inconvenient for him not to know English when he was passing through that country. To which the great man's reply was, "When England wants to talk with me she will learn my language!" "From their astonishment at this answer," said Hugo in relating the story, "it was evident they did not know who I was!"—"Victor Hugo, His Life and Work," by A. F. Davidson.

Echoes From Horses' Skulls.

Those curious twists and turns superstitions take are to be found in the introduction of horses' skulls in or about the church buildings in England and Scotland, the reason alleged being to help the sound in church. This habit is unquestionably a relic of heathenism where an animal was sacrificed. Some years ago, when an old meeting house in Edinburgh was pulled down, the sounding board space above the pulpit was found to be filled with horses' skulls. In some parts of England there still exists the idea that if a horse's head is buried in a field there will be an echo.

Quite Frank About It.

"So you are going to marry Tom?"

"You saw the announcement, didn't you?"

"Yes, but"—

"It wasn't a fake."

"But, dearie—I never thought that Tom would be your choice."

"Tom ain't my choice. He's my chance. Have you any other questions to ask, darling?"

Darling decided she hadn't.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Energy of Will.

Energy of will is the soul of every great character. Where it is there is resolute character; where it is not there is faintness, with effeminacy, despondency, neglect of duty and failure. "The strong man and the waterfall," says a proverb, "channel their own path."

In Training.

A LITERARY RIDDLE

Who Was It Wrote the Tragedy of Troilus and Cressida?

Andrew Lang has just propounded a puzzle in circumstantial evidence. "Who," he asks, "wrote 'Troilus and Cressida?' You may answer, as you please, Shakespeare or Bacon. If you answer Bacon, Andrew Lang comes back with the query, 'Would Bacon have said that Aristotle lived before the Trojan war?' Bacon was too learned a man to make such a mistake, which would be as bad as placing Abraham Lincoln among the signers of the Declaration of Independence.

If you answer Shakespeare, Andrew Lang shoots another query at you: 'The author makes Ulysses and Achilles quote an author and discuss a pretty long and strange passage from that author, who was Plato. How could Shakespeare have read Plato?' For Shakespeare knew no Greek, and in his day Plato had not yet been translated into English.

It is quite conceivable that Shakespeare might imagine that Plato and Aristotle lived many centuries before Homer, but it is inconceivable that the erudite Bacon should fall into such an error.

Andrew Lang does not pretend to solve the riddle. He frankly says, "I give it up."—New York World.

RISKY POSTAL SERVICE.

In Russia the Government Opens All Suspicious Packages.

Our own service of mails is well organized. There is little doubt in the mind of the average person that when he posts a letter it will reach its destination.

But in other lands he might well fear for its safety. In Russia, for instance, any letter or parcel that is regarded with suspicion is immediately opened and its contents noted. A clever machine gums it up again, so that the recipient does not know that it has been tampered with.

In Lapland the mails are carried in sledges drawn by reindeers. In the wilds of the Caucasus the postman holds a post of danger. He must be protected against brigands and against the weather, for he often has to climb mountains more than 12,000 feet high.

Asiatic Russia, which is apt to be marshy, has the buffalo post, and, of course, the progress made is very slow. Buffaloes are more powerful than oxen, and they are also used in Siberia for carrying the mail.

Other postmen in foreign lands are the swimming postman of India and the skiing letter carrier of the Andes. For the latter place the Argentine government specially imports Norwegians.—Exchange.

Mexico's Smoking Mountain.

In 1897 I climbed two volcanoes in Mexico, Popocatepetl, or "the smoking mountain," about 17,800 feet, and Orizaba, the former the most famous because within view from Mexico City and thus a source of especial pride and admiration to the inhabitants, who have been loath to believe that any other of their mountains could be higher. Popo has a really splendid crater, about half a mile across and 1,000 feet deep. The walls are generally vertical, but in one or two places it is possible to descend. When workers are engaged in collecting sulphur machinery is used to hoist them up and down. From Popo's summit there is a glorious prospect, not alone of the immense crater, but of the beautiful "White Lady" (Iztaccihuatl) reclining a thousand feet below of Orizaba on the far horizon and of the charming valley of Mexico.—Annie S. Peck in Christian Herald.

Wellington's Integrity.

The Duke of Wellington was noted for his rigid integrity. Here is an instance which occurred in reference to his large estate. Some farm adjoining his lands was for sale, and his agent negotiated for him for the purchase. Having concluded the business, he went to the duke and told him he had made a capital bargain. "What do you mean?" asked the duke. "Why, your grace, I have got the farm for so much, and I know it to be worth at least so much more." "Are you quite sure of that?" "Quite sure, your grace, for I have carefully surveyed it." "Very well, then; pay the gentleman from me the balance between what you have already given and the real value of the estate."

Strong Circumstantial Evidence.

A young wife was in tears a few mornings ago when her mother called. When asked what was the matter she replied that her husband was out late the night before and had been to a drinking party.

"What makes you think he had been to a drinking party?" asked the mother.

More Careful Now.

The young wife had given her husband a dance. "You've improved wonderfully, Jack," she said as they sat down. "Don't you remember how you used to tear my dress?"

"Yes," he replied. "I wasn't buying them then."—Boston Transcript.

SPECIAL FEATURE AT THE COYLE

A one-reel feature at the Coyle Theatre next Thursday. King Baggot as a parson comes to Tennessee mountain village to a cabin where a brother and sister live with their old father. The two men are engaged in moonshining, and the girl is in sympathy with them. The brother suspects the parson of being a revenue officer and attempts to drive him away, but is frustrated. One day the parson comes across the still and endeavors to disuade the men f rom their illegeal practice. But for the girl he would nave been shot. Later, he makes another trip to the still, where he is surprised by revenue officers. Rather than betray the men he serves a year in the penitentary, when he returns and marries the pretty sister of the moonshiner.

This is the first picture to be produced for the Imp Company by Mr. James Kirkwood. The acting is strong and in conformity to conditions of a Tennessee village. The characterization is very apt and the work of Miss Jane Fearley as the moonshiner's sister is particularly well done.
